To William Lloyd Garrison

‹Farmington, (Conn.)› Asks W.L.G. to write "a thorough review" of W. E. Channing's book on Slavery. Called on Dr. ‹Joel› Hawes of Hartford and discussed with him a sermon to be delivered in the Free Church there. J. H. didn't wholly agree with A. A. P. on Anti-Slavery doctrines, and seemed very anxious to avoid criticism. Plans to call a convention to organize a Connecticut State Anti-Slavery society. "After convention there, I hope to have Stanton with me in this state." Wishes G. Thompson had stayed on through the Spring. "... some of our friends are a little too anxious to get the influence of great names ..."

[Boston] The writer recommends his brother-in-law Moore as a minister. Explains the motives in the "collision between the state & national [Anti-Slavery] societies, referring to a statement of the case in the Christian Journal Extra." The addressee's County Board has invited the agents of the American Society, "thus virtually taking sides with that society." The County society is soon to meet in New Bedford where, the writer fears, "an effort will be made to undo what the county board have done." The writer considers "the Parent Committee in the right." The State Board are opposed to it because they wish to crush the Massachu[illegible] Abolitionist (a periodical), favored by the Parent (N. Boston. The writer states that the war (between the two factions of Abolitionists) is "avowedly & emphatically one of 'extermination,'" and that their non-resistance opponents "stick at no means fair or foul." The war is as much against "you at New York as against us." The writer urges the addressee to come to Boston to speak at the meeting arranged by the Ladies (Anti-Slavery) Society in order to advertise their fair to the public. Considers it very important that the fair go off well. "The other Fair" raised $1500, but to a considerable extent, "those that made the articles had to buy them."

₌London₌ A letter about the Phillips' trip to London in the summer of 1839. Wendell Phillips couldn't go to Scotland, even at G. Thompson's urgent request. The writer describes an interview with Thompson, Elizabeth Pease, and tells about the articles they were sending to the Anti-Slavery fair. Thompson thought England's cotton could be obtained from India, and not from American slaveholders. E. Pease asked many questions about the Grimkés. Writer looked for presents of clothing for the addressee and her children, but could find nothing. Tells about a vi[illegible]rom Mrs. ₌Joshua₌ Bates. This letter contains much dialo[illegible]

To Kate Field

«227 Wilmot Ave., Chicago» The writer wrote to Mr. Garnsey inquiring whether an association had been organized to raise money to remove the John Brown Fort to Harper's Ferry. Says he tried to find out how the people of Harper's Ferry felt about the project. Quotes a letter from the mayor of Harper's Ferry saying a site had been procured on Bolivar Heights. Says that the B. & O. R.R. will move the Fort free of charge. Mr. Garnsey says that the present owner would donate the Fort. Thinks money to erect the Fort can be raised in Chicago.

Article for the Liberty Bell

[London] Eulogy of the late James C. Alvord. "His services to the cause of Anti-Slavery in the Legislature of Massachusetts cannot be too highly estimated." The right of trial by jury to persons claimed as slaves was won because it was Alvord who argued for it. Notes also Alvord's "unanswerable and beautifully clear reply to Preston's Resolution in the Report on Texas." Cites also the hearing of Miss Grimké in behalf of petitioners when Alvord presided over the Committee on the District of Columbia,-"an act of justice to woman, almost ... unexampled."

«No pl.» The writer has "reported something that may pass for my answer to «John» Pierpont." Is grateful for the offer of the addressee's mother to receive Ann (Mrs.Phillips) and aid the writer's going to Philadelphia. But it is impossible for him to go. Knows through (James Miller) McKim that Douglass and Remond will be there. Caroline Weston "has just awaked to find herself famous – as a poet! Her description of the Comeouters is at once graphic, & spirit-stirring." Tells that "Ann «Mrs.Phillips» is quite poorly." Comments on George Thompson's "poor speech on a good cause," but distrusts the Broad Street Reports of it [illegible]izzie Pease has sent a good sensible piece for Liberty [illegible]."

To "Dear Friend & 1/3 an Editor".Mrs.Maria (Weston) Chapman.

.(Natick,Mass.). Suggests that the addressee's "representative pro temp last week" (on the Standard) made a mistake in publishing (Edward Strutt) Abdy's letter about (Henry)Colman. The writer, on reading "European Agriculture," understood Colman to mean certain strictures "in sarcastic irony" and intended a remark in pity, not in contempt. Abdy, not knowing "the general lay of his mind," has misunderstood Colman."Why not correct it now?" Henry Colman has rather "stood with us in the cause - than the other side." In respect to the Standard, the writer's advice "w[illegible] be dock off the agents if so doing we can keep the Stand[illegible]flying. But perhaps they are necessary to keep it flying."

«(~~Nahant,~~ Mass.?)» The writer proposes that, in writing to (Ralph Waldo) Emerson for a contribution to the Liberty Bell, she might suggest his giving her an extract from his Anti-Slavery speech-"say his analysis of Webster, which was very acute & finely wrought, or his indignant denunciation of the 'no hidden law' heresy." The writer mentions this because "reluctance to write something new, or difficulty of inventing a subject are the very frequent cause of the 'no' you receive." In a postscript the writer suggests numerous names (of possible contributors?) [illegible]ong them "a poetess Miss Townsend ... she wrote 'Milton [illegible]is Blindness' which some papers mistook for a newly dis[illegible]red poem of J. Milton."
